

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

FINDINGS

1. Pricing & Brand Positioning Findings

- Jacob Cohen has the highest average jeans price (₹33K+), positioning itself strongly in the luxury premium denim segment.
- Premium international brands such as Tramarossa, Karl Lagerfeld, and Just Cavalli dominate the top pricing category.
- Mid-range products contribute the largest share of the catalog, indicating strong customer preference toward affordable premium fashion.
- There is a major pricing gap between luxury and budget brands, showing clear market segmentation within the jeans category.
- Budget and mid-range brands generate higher customer engagement despite lower product pricing.

2. Discount Analysis Findings

- United Colors Of Benetton offers the highest average discount percentage, followed by Highlander and Roadster.
- Products with discounts between 50%–60% still maintain ratings above 4.0, indicating strong customer value perception.
- Heavy discounting does not negatively impact customer ratings, suggesting customers still perceive good quality.
- Most high-discount products belong to established brands, showing aggressive promotional strategies to increase market reach.
- Brands with moderate pricing and strong discounts tend to receive higher review volumes and engagement.

3. Customer Ratings Findings

- Most product ratings fall between 3.8 and 4.5, showing generally positive customer satisfaction across the platform.
- Very few products are rated below 3.0, indicating overall good product quality among listed brands.
- The highest concentration of ratings lies around 4.0–4.3, showing consistent product performance.
- Nike has the highest average rating among major brands, followed by Bawse.
- Premium brands tend to maintain slightly higher ratings, suggesting strong product quality and brand trust.

4. Customer Engagement & Reviews Findings

- Roadster has the highest total reviews, indicating strong customer reach and product popularity.
- United Colors Of Benetton and Highlander also show high customer engagement and strong marketplace visibility.
- Affordable and mid-range brands dominate review counts, suggesting higher purchasing frequency in value-driven segments.
- Brands with higher review counts generally maintain good ratings, indicating strong customer trust and repeat purchases.
- Popular brands balance affordability, discounts, and quality effectively to maximize customer engagement.

5. Product Segment Findings

- Mid-range products form the largest product segment within the dataset.
- Premium products occupy a smaller share but contribute significantly higher pricing value.
- Budget products maintain strong sales activity due to affordability and discount-driven purchasing behavior.
- Customer engagement is highest in the mid-range category, indicating it is the most competitive and preferred segment.
- The dataset reflects a balanced fashion marketplace catering to budget, mid-range, and luxury consumers.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Pricing Recommendations

- Mid-range pricing strategies should be prioritized, as this segment attracts the highest customer engagement and product volume.
- Luxury brands should maintain premium positioning while improving promotional visibility to increase reach.
- Budget brands can introduce slightly premium collections to improve profitability while retaining customer base.
- Dynamic pricing strategies can be implemented during seasonal sales to maximize conversions.

2. Discount Strategy Recommendations

- Brands offering high discounts with strong ratings should continue promotional campaigns to sustain customer acquisition.
- Discounts should be strategically applied to low-engagement products to improve visibility and sales.
- Personalized discount campaigns based on customer behavior can improve conversion rates.
- Brands with low discounts but strong ratings may benefit from limited-time promotional offers.

3. Customer Experience Recommendations

- Brands with lower ratings should analyze customer feedback to improve product quality and sizing consistency.
- Highly rated brands should highlight customer reviews and ratings in marketing campaigns.
- Customer review analysis can help identify key satisfaction drivers and product improvement opportunities.
- Maintaining ratings above 4.0 should be a key business benchmark for marketplace success.

4. Marketing Recommendations

- High-performing brands such as Roadster and United Colors Of Benetton should receive stronger homepage and campaign visibility.
- Popular mid-range products should be promoted during festive and seasonal sales.
- Data-driven influencer and social media campaigns can improve visibility for emerging brands.
- Customer segmentation strategies can improve targeting for budget, premium, and mid-range buyers.

5. Business Recommendations

- The company should focus on balancing affordability, discounts, and product quality to maintain customer trust.
- High-engagement brands should be used as benchmark models for improving underperforming brands.
- Review and rating analytics should be monitored continuously for product optimization.
- Expanding successful pricing and discount strategies across similar brands can improve overall marketplace performance.